Traffic Laws Are To Help State Police

"Traffic laws are on your side. Whose side are YOU on?" This question was put to the citizens of Maine by Col. Francis J. McCabe, Chief, Maine State Police, McCabe, speaking in behalf of the "Know and Obey Traffic Laws" program which is being conducted by the Maine State Police during February, branded as suicidal during the current disregard of traffic laws so prevalent throughout the country. He stated that in almost all traffic accidents, one or more traffic laws are violated by motorists, pedestrians, or both.

"It is high time," Chief McCabe said, "that motorists and pedestrians recognize the fact that traffic laws and regulations are made for their protection. Too many people are inclined to regard these laws as restrictive and to ignore them whenever it suits their convenience."

He pointed out that if every driver and every pedestrian observed traffic laws and regulations and safe walking and driving rules, the annual traffic toll would be reduced considerably. This, quite obviously, places the responsibility for his own safety squarely upon everyone who travels our streets and highways.

The driver, he added, gambles his life and the lives of other motorists and pedestrians each time he is guilty of one of the following unsafe acts: exceeds a safe speed—falls to give a car on the right the right of way at an intersection—falls to give pedestrians already in the cross walk the right of way—does not come to a full stop at a stop sign—ignores a red light or a school zone slow sign.

"The pedestrian," he concluded, "is just as foolhardy when he starts out from behind parked cars, crosses between intersections, or walks along the road with his back to traffic."

A Labor Leader Speaks

The greatest need in the realm of management-labor relations is for mutual understanding and trust. When management understands what is in the minds and hearts of the employees, when the employees understand the problems confronting the "boss" in our competitive enterprise system, and when each appreciates the viewpoint of the other, then we have a foundation upon which to build labor-management trust and achieve greater productivity and a better living standard for all.

Freedom Forum XIII at Harding College went a long way toward getting at the problem of mutual understanding and distrust between these vital groups who hold the future progress of America in their hands. Among our conference were representatives of organized labor, the church, education, big business and little business from 20 states. Since every American has a stake in the management-labor problem, I'm devoting the next few columns to the lessons we studied at the Forum.

Good Citizen

Keith Claxton is a labor leader. He's 39, a native of Boone County, Mo., a high school graduate. In December, 1942, he began work at the A. B. Chance Company plant at Centralia, Mo. But a month later he was in the U. S. Army. Keith saw combat service on three fronts. Twice he was wounded. At war's end, he returned to A. B. Chance and in time became an apprentice machinist. He is now a journeyman machinist in the plant. Keith is president of Local #21 RUC-CIO. He's a member of the local VFW post, the Junior Chamber of Commerce, the Baptist Church, and is chairman of the local scout committee of the Boy Scouts of America. He has three youngsters: two boys and a girl.

Speaking to the cross-section Forum audience, containing preachers, teachers, management and labor representatives, he said: "You probably wonder what are the ambitions of a man like me. I suppose I'm not much different from you. Usually we fellows in the plant want to better ourselves, make more money, have a higher standard of living for ourselves and our families."

No. 1—Job Security

"The first thing the average employee wants is job security. When a man feels his job is secure, not subject to someone else's whim, he's going to be a more loyal employee and take more interest in his job. Most of the men I know who work in factory jobs today naturally want a good standard of living, they want a job which enables them to make payments on a home, to have an automobile, to pay aside a little for vacations, recreation, and the education of their children. After security in important areas are good living wages and opportunities for advancement. Progress or promotion, or recognition of a job well done, usually helps a man's morale. All of us like to feel that what we're doing is worth while."

"Retirement Security is another important consideration to every worker's mind. None of us can go on working forever. We like to think that while our youth is slipping away we are helping to build financial security for our old age. People want to be financially independent of worry to their old age, and actually most of them would like to be building that security while they are able to work, so they can be independent in their old age, through their own efforts, and not have to depend on some government agency or some other form of government aid."

Responsibilities, Too

"Likewise it would be difficult for me to rest easy if I had to worry about my hospital bills, medical bills, and medicines, plus the fact that with such bills, I might not have the money to pay for groceries and the other necessities of living. I honestly feel that industry today could make a worthy contribution by taking the lead

★ AUTHOR OF "HOW TO STOP WORRYING AND START LIVING" ★

GILBERT CARLETON, Madison, Wisconsin, a few years back was the victim of failure, not a financial failure, but a partnership failure. His partner had become afflicted with the evils of too much liquor. For two weeks he couldn't eat or sleep. He was worried sick and had a fear of meeting the people of the town. He took a night job as operator in a small electric light plant and worked from 11 pm to 7 am. This way he could work at night and sleep during the day and did not have to come in contact with people he knew.

After a month he discovered this method was no good. About this time a friend asked him to sell insurance. He was like a drowning man and grabbed the first line that was tossed to him.

In trying to sell insurance he had to talk to people. Before he realized it, he had become a good listener and was gradually forgetting his worries and getting interested in people. He discovered that under every roof there was a different story, and he cared less about making sales and more about people. He worked from twelve to sixteen hours a day, for he was anxious to find what kind of story awaited him at the next place.

Before he knew it the sales were rolling in, and at the end of the first year he had won an all expense vacation trip for his wife and himself to Chicago. At that meeting he was promoted to special representative, and last year he was appointed agency manager for Southern Wisconsin.

So his advice to you is, if we think we have worries and a story to tell, start talking to people; get interested in them; be a good listener and help them.

Scanning the NEWS

• The big news story for the next few weeks, now that the inauguration is over, is the battle developing in congress to cut President Truman's $70,587,000,000 budget.

A cut is a certainty since President Eisenhower is under firm campaign pledges to cut taxes and to balance the budget as soon as possible. This brings up the two major problems facing congress: (1) Where can taxes be cut, and (2) Where can the budget be sliced?

As for the first, the new administration is doing everything in its power to keep from giving the taxpayer any hope of a cut this year. And for the second, there are a number of major problems:

- (1) Of the total budget, 73 cents of every dollar would go for national security programs—military services, foreign aid, and foreign relations, atomic energy, promoting defense production and economic stability, civil defense, and the merchant marine. The total amount is $37,500,000,000. The total item is just how much can the new administration trim from this without jeopardizing the national security?
- (2) Another section of the proposed budget calls for the expenditure of $4.5 billion for veterans' benefits. This item is considered uncuttable politically. Little, if any, cut is expected here.
- (3) One of the big items, other than price supports on farm products, would be $250,000,000 for an agricultural conservation program under which payments are made to farmers for carrying out approved soil conservation practices. Here a cut may be made since some farm groups are reported willing to take less for this activity.
- (4) Some $10 billion is earmarked for all other government activities. There is not much to cut from this item.

Since the federal government's income for the next fiscal year is estimated at approximately $90 billion, then to balance the budget about $10 billion must be cut. It becomes obvious, then, that any important cuts must come from the $37 billion marked for national security, a little can be saved from the $10 billion earmarked for other government activities.

Besides cutting foreign aid, eliminating waste and duplication in the Defense Department is one of the most popular solutions proposed. Many believe that the new President, with his military background, will find a way of trimming the fat from the military budget.

Happenings That Affect the Future of Every Individual — National and International Problems Inseparable From Local Welfare

Millions of words of comment have by now rolled off the nation's press on President Eisenhower's inaugural address—almost all of it favorable. The address was a stirring message and an historic one. Its tone and context clearly showed that the United States is ready to take his rightful place in world affairs.

The American faith of today is the abiding creed of our fathers. In the President's words, "It is our faith in the deathless dignity of man, governed by eternal moral and natural laws....this faith rules our whole way of life. It decrees that we the people elect leaders not to rule but to serve. It asserts that we have the right to choice of our own work and to the reward of our own toil. It inspires the initiative that makes our productivity the wonder of the world...."

"...we stand ready to engage with any and all others in joint effort to remove the causes of mutual fear and distrust among nations, and so to make possible drastic reduction of armaments....we shall never try to placate an aggressor by the false and wicked barter of trading honor for security....we shall strive to help (provide friends of freedom) to achieve their own security and well being (and) we shall count upon them to assume, within the limits of their resources, their full and just burden in the common defense of freedom."

From beginning to end, the inaugural address expressed strong and courageous views such as these. They are an inspiration to freedom loving people throughout the world and no patriotic American who heard the President utter them could help but feel a surge of pride and determination. But not all the inaugural address was concerned with our relationships with other nations. It called upon us to accept individually and as a nation "What-

GRASS ROOTS OPINION

Madera, Calif., News-Tribune: "There have been several reports, reprinted in many newspapers that the United States has succeeded in exploding the first hydrogen bomb. These reports came from service personnel who were described as eye-witnesses to the explosion. No American newspaper wishes to undermine this country by publishing material which might endanger its safety. But it is not wise to prohibit coverage of one of the world's most important news events by trained newspapermen and at the same time permit accounts of what happened to be made public by service personnel."

Ventura, Calif., County News: "The people spoke....not just for a change in political leadership, but for a change-of-course for the Ship of State. No more of this fairly effortless running-free, they said, let's come about, into the wind, trim our sails and drive her. This was the mandate to Ike. It was more than that. It was likewise a mandate to ourselves—to roll up our sleeves and our bell-bottomed trousers and turn-to for the new skipper."

The New Yorker: "A photograph in the Times the other morning showed the Declaration of Independence and the United States Constitution on the move—a couple of non-semi-precious documents being shifted from the Library of Congress to the National Archives building. A military escort attended them, an armored car bristled in the background, bagpipers squeaked their delight and kindled the blood. How uncomplicated it looked, the physical act of guarding our greatest treasures! And how serene life would be if the essence of the documents could be guarded so easily, so precisely, and with such easy props as bagpipes and such exact ones as machine guns. Ah, liberty—you look so simple crossing town!"

The new administration in Washington took over a government that is too big and too complex to be managed efficiently. The burden of its cost has grown too heavy for the economy to carry and remain prosperous.

The federal government has undergone this growth because it took over powers and responsibilities properly belonging to state and local governments. To do that, it increased federal taxes to such an extent that the sources of state and local revenue have become seriously depleted.

The certain cure of this condition is to restore to state and local governments their constitutional powers and responsibilities, and at the same time to set aside certain taxes or their use.

That will bring government "back home"—from Washington.

A state-wide curfew for teenagers is the proposal of the Child Welfare Co-ordinating committee of the Department of Massachusetts American Legion. How far the curfew would extend is not stated in the suggestion, but a study of the project has been underway for several months.

While the survey showed that some communities were not interested in such a plan, many others showed unusual interest. A state-wide curfew would seem to be a difficult project to enforce. Some communities have big teenage centers and regularly supervised programs for the special leisure entertainment of the young crowd. Therefore, a curfew which wouldn't affect the outside activities in one town, might cut into a dance or other program in another.

The Legion group plans to consult the Massachusetts Police Chiefs Association and other law enforcement agencies in a further study of a teenage curfew, which they unanimously concluded is needed. We agree that something should be done to curb the prevalent custom of young people having "nights out" when they can't be expected home until morning, but we also believe that they are entitled to "nights out" at dances or other supervised activities.

A state-wide curfew would require much flexibility to permit a variety of approved activities, and at the same time would require strict limitations if it is to do any good. That's a delicate balance which most parents find hard to manage, and without their aid no curfew is going to do much good.

V. A. NEWSLETTER

Many veterans receiving benefit checks from the Veterans Administration should promptly notify their nearest VA office if they intend to move from their present address. Manager M. L. Stoddard of the V. A. Center, Togus, said today.

Every year some 60,000 benefit checks cannot be delivered to veterans throughout the country because the veterans moved and failed to notify VA of their new addresses, Stoddard said.

VA beneficiaries should advise the VA, over their signatures, of their full name, claim number and both old and new address. To insure uninterrupted receipt of benefits, according to Manager Stoddard, he suggested that the name and new address be block-printed.

In addition to its desire to deliver benefit payments promptly to veterans, VA primarily is interested in eliminating extra clerical work entailed in handling checks returned for lack of correct address of the recipient, Stoddard said.

—Question and Answer—
Q—I am a widow of a World War II veteran. My husband had GI insurance and specified that I was to get monthly payments for the rest of my life. If I die before the full amount of the policy has been paid out, I would like the remaining payments to go to my daughter. How can this be arranged?

A—Even though you are the beneficiary of your husband's policy, you cannot arrange the way the remaining money is to be paid. If there are any remaining payments when you die, they will go to the person your husband named as the contingent beneficiary. If he did not name one, the money will go to his estate.

Thursday, February 5
Gather up the fragments that remain, that nothing be lost. (John 6:12) Read John 6:1-12.

In Jesus' time, food was rarely plentiful in Galilee. It was natural that after the feeding of the multitude He would tell His disciples to gather up the fragments. If He were with us in the flesh today, He probably would tell us to do the same, and to gather up also the fragments of time which we so frequently waste.

A few years ago, a distinguished newspaper columnist died. In one of his last columns, he remarked on his failure properly to appreciate the preciousness of the common aspects of family life that he had earlier overlooked. He told how he had discovered during a long illness the tenderness, devotion and utterly selfless love of his wife as he had never known it before.

A mere fragment of time taken each morning for prayer and meditation can sweeten the entire day. A moment taken from the task to utter a brief word of commendation may bless and brighten another's life immeasurably. Such are the little things that are really big when the last chapter in our book of life is written.

Prayer

Teach us, good Father, to gather up the loose ends of time at our disposal, day by day, and weave them into a pattern of gracious, Christian living. In the Spirit of the Master we pray, Amen.

Thought for the Day
Little things are often the big things of life.

—Thomas A. Stafford (Illinois)

And thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind, and with all thy strength: this is the first commandment.

—(St. Mark XII, 30.)
Surely we are letting ourselves in for trouble, for disappointment, for a denial of the complete happiness that could be ours, if we disregard these words of Jesus and thus delude ourselves into thinking that just loving God a little—while indulging ourselves—is enough. The fact is that a little self-indulgence grows into a lot of it, and when the Lord is crowded out.

So many of our taxes are collected as a hidden part of the cost of all the things we buy that most people don't realize the magnitude of the load. In 1953 all tax average less than $400 per family today the figure is close to $2,000. —Hollbrook (Mass.) Times.

THE USES OF ADVERSITY

"In the world you shall have distress," says the Apostle John. Suffering is an inescapable fact of living. Unfortunately, to some people suffering seems a senseless cruelty that contradicts Christian teaching concerning the love and goodness of God.

Suffering is as much a mystery to devout Christians as it is to those who presume to question the ways of God. God permits adversity to plague even the good.

By showing fortitude in adversity, the devout Christian offers a homage that is altogether pleasing to his Creator. More than that, he converts suffering into an opportunity to share in the patient endurance of Christ Himself, who said: "If anyone will come after Me, let him deny himself, and take up his cross daily."

Nothing that happens to a man, whether of good or evil, escapes the eyes of God. Many accept the blessings of life without a thought of God, from whom all gifts come. But these same people are quick to complain—sometimes to the point of blasphemy—when some major tragedy or misfortune overtakes them.

Suffering is of real importance in the spiritual life no thinking Christian denies. A man enjoying prosperity and success may have "no time" for God. But let adversity overtake him, and he soon discovers the need for this Supreme Friend. It often happens that adversity dissolves the complacency of men and banishes from their hearts the spirit of indifference or irreverence that stems from self-satisfaction.

ALBANY - WATERFORD

Lillian L. Brown, Corres.

Berkeley G. Henley of Waterford and Mechanic Falls closed a deal January 24th when he purchased a tract of land containing six hundred acres, located near Southwest Bend in Durham, south of the Auburn-Durham town line. More than half of the land is in timber and on the property is a mica mine which is reported to contain the highest grade mica in New England. Mr. Henley has had logging operations on other lots in that section in the past years. When Mr. and Mrs. Henley's business at their Mechanic Falls hatchery ends in June they think of moving to their home on Sawin Hill for the summer.

Miss Jean Henley, a graduate of Fryburg Academy, has enrolled as a student nurse at the Household Nursing Association School of Attendant Nursing in Boston.

Leslie Fleck visited Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Brown Wednesday afternoon.

James Morrison was a recent caller at Ernest Brown's.

His brakes were poor and his lights were dim (but things like that never bothered him).

His heart was light and his countenance good—

So he sped along as fast as his could.

He just didn't see that car in time (hence, the occasion for this rhyme).

The boys on the corner freely state: "A case of too little...and too late!"

THE AMERICAN WAY

Is Ike the Answer?

by
Dr. Alfred
P. Haake

Alfred P. Haake

(EDITOR'S NOTE: Alfred P. Haake, Ph.D., is Chairman of the Laymen's National Committee and Mayor of Park Ridge, Illinois.)

On the morning of November 5, 1952, millions of Americans thanked God for the election of Dwight Eisenhower as President of the United States. After twenty years of growing and apparently invincible domination by one political group, a third world war looming, corruption and treachery rampant, with inflation and possible bankruptcy more than a mere idle threat, America was given a reprieve from the dangers threatening her very existence.

To many millions who thought thus, Ike was the answer.

But, is he? Dare we assume that even so great a man, with so splendid a record, elected by the greatest popular majority ever given any American, can in himself constitute the remedy against trends that have been gathering force through more than 20 years?

My answer to that question is "NO." The course of the empire is still under way. Socialism continues to creep into more and more power with the steady growth of central government.

In the last analysis, President Eisenhower must give the American people what he believes they really want. Otherwise he will relinquish his job after four years for a restoration of the welfare state begun under Roosevelt and carried on by Truman. The tyranny, waste and corruption of the two "deals" are not peculiar to a few men in Washington. They grew out of the changed ideas and standards of the American people.

Dictatorship, whether frankly in the form of empire and absence of public representation or within the shell of a Republic with meaningless provisions for sovereignty of the people, does not come overnight in such a country as America. It grows, bit by bit, and moves step by step through the gradual shifting of responsibility and power from the people to their government.

In my youth we considered government as the responsibility of a self-governing people, supported by the people and limited in power by a respected Constitution. Just when it happened, no man can say, but through the years since my youth the old doctrine has been cast aside and in its place we now have the theory that government is responsible for the people and must have the power to plan for them.

We have preserved the form of a Constitutional Republic, with its symbols of checks and balances in the Executive, Legislative and Judicial Departments, but have permitted the character of the state to become that of a benevolent despot. Instead of the people being responsible for the government, the government is held responsible for the welfare of the people. From national defense the federal government has moved into community economic life and even invaded the stronghold of democracy, the school system. Washington decides what is good for us and then sees to it that it is done.

That statement is more forthright than the devious ways in which it is implemented in the functioning of federal government with its millions of employees in its hundreds of bureaus, but it points to the problem we really face.

Abraham Lincoln was humble before the rights and powers of the people. Mr. Franklin D. Roosevelt frankly advised the Congress not to be too particular about observing Constitutional limits, but it remained for Harry Truman to use with brutal candor that he could seize what industries he pleased, including press and radio. Yet a little while and he might have lifted the crown of empire to his own brow.

So far had we gone down the road toward totalitarianism, under the guise of welfare for the people and the seemingly innocent doctrine that a thing is Constitutional if it is believed to be good for the people.

We cannot discuss here the specific measure needed to correct the trend. But it is fair to say that "The is not the answer." His election is a reprieve for the people, but it would be utterly unreasonable and unfair to expect that real and great man to undo what a people themselves have permitted and even encouraged. We must restore the roots of democracy in self-reliance, build back our Constitutional Republic in the hearts and minds of the people. Only then have we a right to expect the kind of miracle that may be demanded of our new President and his Administration.

I guess that this is the weather that we have been looking for for the last month or so. I am not trying to prognosticate the weather but it does seem to me from what I have observed during the short life that I have lived, that we have just about so much winter here whether it comes all in one bunch or whether it is spread over three or four months time.

I guess that Calso is here to stay at least for ten years anyway for that is the lease that they hold so if I am lucky I may have a job for a while anyway unless I refuse to work which is quite likely as I am of a very lazy nature naturally. Of course I am not in business to make money but only to serve the public.

"EASY DOES IT"

Wear decorative flowers with your clothes? Dye them to match or contrast properly with your color scheme. You can immerse white flowers in liquid flower dye, shake off the excess and rinse in clear water.

Sweaters will dry quickly and easily if you lay them on a bath towel and press to shape. Place another bath towel over the sweater and roll out the extra moisture with a rolling pin.

Sequined dresses, blouses, scarfs, etc., can be pressed easily thus: turn all sequins in the same direction, place garment side down on board, pad with a soft cloth, cover with tissue paper and press with a warm iron.

Keep your belts in good order and easily accessible by hanging them from the buckle from nails near the top of closet doors. Drape scarfs over racks below the belts to utilize the door fully.

RECIPE OF THE WEEK

Cottage Cheese Dressing
(Makes 1 cup)

3 tablespoons lemon juice
6 tablespoons cottage cheese
4 tablespoons evaporated milk
1/4 teaspoon salt
2 teaspoons sugar or honey
Dash of paprika
1 tablespoon chopped chives, if desired
Beat all ingredients together until smooth. Serve with fruit or green salads.

Precious hose can be protected from dirty boot or splash tops by fitting a couple of tissues around the tops and folding over the outside. The tissues absorb dirt and moisture.

Keep some cellophane tape handy near your dressing table. It can be used to hold a hem in place if you need to do something about it during an emergency.

Have a small or medium sized embroidery hoop in your mending basket. It's excellent for holding material stretched tight when you need to do some darning.

Have a stiff-bristled brush near your ironing board for aid in pressing. It can be used for brushing before or after pressing.

Traditional House Design From Small Homes Guide

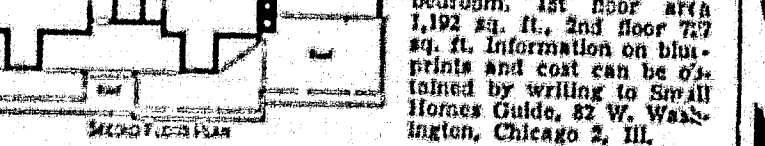

3 Bedrooms
2 Baths

In this era of contemporary design, many families yearn for the traditional. This is a house for those people: a story and a half home in which one could never feel crowded.

Every room has generous dimensions, and is easy to get to. Living room has unusually large wall area, a room for furniture arrangement. The separate dining room, absent from many modern plans, is present here, as well as a breakfast nook for casual meals. Aisle-type kitchen is ideal for convenient placement of appliances and work space.

Architect Arnold Schaffner locates a bedroom and bath suite on the main floor, two bedrooms and a bath above. Note the window expanse in the first floor bedroom. 1st floor area 1,192 sq. ft., 2nd floor 727 sq. ft. Information on blueprint and cost can be obtained by writing to Small Homes Guide, 82 W. Washington, Chicago 2, Ill.

WORTH REPEATING

"Colleges and universities must have assistance from some source in order to close the financial gap. If the source is the federal government there is real danger of loss of free freedom since there is only one federal government. However, the thousands of private industrialists who could support education have such diversified interests that this diversification would serve as a guarantee against invasion."—Dean Thomas H. Carroll, University of North Carolina.

"The money problems of State and local governments can't be solved by dribbles of Federal 'grants-in-aid.' It would help these governments far more if the Federal Treasury would let go its strangle-hold on the sources of revenue, and let them raise their own funds for projects approved by the taxpayers. That would give back to State and local governments the rights and powers guaranteed by the Constitution."—Roxbury (Mass.) Gazette.

GOULD ACADEMY

GOULD WINS THRILLER, 51-50

Recovering from two defeats at the hands of South Paris, Gould Academy played one of its best games of the year and pulled out a surprising victory at the Norway Armory last Friday. Right from the starting whistle the Huskies took the lead and were never headed or tied, until 10 seconds remained in the game when Greenleaf dropped two free throws to bring the score to 50-50. Skip Melville then started dribbling up the floor and was fouled, giving him two free throws. He made good the first one which meant the ball game as the second shot rebounded into the air the gun ended the game. It was a thriller and the 13th straight victory over Norway High. The last victory for Norway over the Huskies was a 40-47 win in 1947.

Outstanding for the winners was Paul Fossett who did a great job on rebounds and led the scoring with 19 points. Murphy played a defensive game against Guilford and helped the cause with 12 points. The loss of Rolfe in the final period almost proved fatal as he also had handled rebounds well and had conducted for 10 points. White played much improved ball and Melville, besides scoring the winning point, played his usual cool, smart game.

For Norway, Thurston, at center, was a great performer as he led his mates with 22 points. Guilford also scored in double figures with 14.

In the second game at the Armory South Paris kept its conference lead by downing Bridgton 52-37.

The article points to the enterprise and industry of Maine people in telling the story of how Mrs. Bradbury built this mill from virtual bankruptcy to a thriving business employing 55 men and doing a $300,000 gross annually.

Now 61 years old, Mrs. Bradbury, when asked if she considered selling out, replied, "Not on your untiny, what would I do with my time if I retired?"

GOULD 52-WILTON 37

Gould Academy's basketballers produced their finest performance of the year as they shellacked top ranking Wilton Academy to the tune of 52-37. Excellent defensive work was the major factor in the victory as the Huskies had the Wilton offense completely bewildered during the first half in which the Eagles could score only three field goals.

With Fossett popping four baskets in the first period, Gould stepped out front 14 to 8, increasing the margin to 15 points with a 27 to 12 half-time score. Wilton fought hard in the last half but the determined Gould five continued their mastery and had the game clinched by the end of the third period with the score 40-20. Fossett (16), Rolfe (14), Murphy (12), were the chief scorers but Melville and White played excellent ball and added their bit to the scoring.

Tops for Wilton was Buchanan, a sub, who played only the second half and led the scoring with 12 points. Lothrop and Toothaker, usual high scorers, were well taken care of as they produced only eight and nine points.

know they have their work cut out for them in this game.

Tuesday night the Pintos will be here for a double header starting at 8:30. The Varsity game will probably be another thriller. Gould took the Pintos 48-45 earlier in the season but since then "Fraser and Co." has defeated South Paris 38-35. The elongated Mexico center is a hard man to stop and Huskies will have to be going their best to pull this one out of the fire.

Another in the School Assembly Service Series programs will be presented in Hamscom Hall, Feb. 6, at 11:15 a. m. George Campbell, a nationally known song leader, humorist and speaker will present a program of songs and music which has been nationally acclaimed. Mr. Campbell was formerly music chairman for the Kiwanis International and director of music for the George Williams College in Chicago. He has also spent several years as program director for the YMCA. In this capacity, he devoted his time to conferences, conventions, leadership training courses, schools, colleges, summer camps thus gaining a wide experience with almost every type of organized group.

During World War II, Mr. Campbell served as a music officer assigned to the morale service division of the War Department and gave a singular contribution to soldier morale for a period of three years.

Regional Biologist, Stephen A. Gendall, of the Maine Department of Inland Fisheries and Game and Game Warden Donald Bouchard were visitors at the Academy on Monday where they conferred with Mr. Emery and members of the Senior Science class. Students of this class are making plans for projects in the study of wild life and both Mr. Gendall and Mr. Bouchard gave very helpful suggestions.
